TOTAL POPULATION, INCREASE, AND DISTRIBUTION.

Population of the state.—Michigan was admitted to the Union as the twenty-sixth state in January, 1837. In 1805 the Lower Peninsula and the eastern end of the Upper were organized as the territory of Michigan; in 1818 the western boundary was extended to the Mississippi River, thus adding to the territory the remainder of the Upper Peninsula and the area now constituting Wisconsin and the northeastern part of Minnesota; and in 1834 the area now constituting the remainder of Minnesota, the state of Iowa, and the eastern parts of North and South Dakota was also added. Upon the organization of Michigan as a state in 1837 its boundaries were fixed as at present.

According to the Fourteenth Census, taken as of January 1, 1920, the population of Michigan is 3,668,412, which represents an increase of 858,239, or 30.5 per cent, since 1910. During the same period the population of the United States increased by 14.9 per cent. The following summary shows the population of the state from 1810 to 1920, inclusive, together with the number and per cent of increase for each decade, in comparison with the per cent of increase for the United States as a whole:

¹ Population returns for 1810, 1820, and 1830 refer to Michigan as constituted at time census was taken. Boundaries changed in 1818, 1834, and 1837. (See text introducing table.)

Counties.—Michigan has 83 counties, of which 35 show increases and 48 decreases as compared with 1910. (See Table 1.) There have been no changes in county boundaries since 1910.

Density of population.—The total land area of the state is 57,480 square miles. The average number of inhabitants to the square mile in 1920 is 63.8 (see Table 1), as against 48.9 in 1910 and 42.1 in 1900.

Minor civil divisions.—The political units into which the counties are divided are collectively termed

"minor civil divisions." The 83 counties of Michigan are made up of 1,376 primary divisions, comprising 1,258 organized townships, 5 unorganized townships, and 113 cities. The incorporated villages, 337 in number, constitute the secondary divisions. Each of 284 villages forms a part of the township in which it is located, and each of the remaining 53 villages comprises parts of two or more townships. (See Table 2.)

Cities.—Michigan has 113 cities, of which Detroit, with a population of 993,678, is the largest. Grand

POPULATION—MICHIGAN.

Rapids, with 137,634, is the only other city having more than 100,000 inhabitants. (See Tables 3 and 4.)

The following summary shows, for each city or village having 25,000 or more inhabitants in 1920, the population at each census for which figures are available, together with the number and per cent of increase during the preceding decade:

Urban and rural population.—The Census Bureau defines urban population as that residing in cities and other incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more, and rural population as that residing outside such incorporated places.

The following summary presents, for the last three censuses, figures showing the urban and rural population of the state distributed among places grouped according to specified limits of population. The classification for each census is based upon the population of the various places as shown by the returns of that census. Consequently the territory comprised within any one class of cities or that designated as urban or as rural does not remain fixed, because any given place may, through the growth or the decline of its population, pass from one class to another at successive censuses. The proportion of the population of Michigan living in places of 2,500 or more increased from 39.3 per cent in 1900 to 47.2 per cent in 1910 and to 61.1 per cent in 1920.
